pupill; one that bath no mind to professe divinity, but a very good scholar, and also a junior master of arts.

" Lastly, of Christ Colledge there is a young man, that is master of arts this yeare, one Mr. Leigh, that for his standing is very well accomplished, and I doubt not, but in a very little time, would be exceedinge fitte for any such employment, as you would designe him for.

." Many more names I could set down} but these may suffice for your choice, and you may, if you thinke good, enquire further concerning any of them from some others, and, if you please, from this gentleman, whom I have for that pur pose desired to present this to you, Mr. George Rust,* fellow of Christ Coltedge, who can-further enforine and satisfy you concerning them. He is an understanding, pious, discreet man, and himselfe I know to bee, a man of exceeding good parts, and a generalle scholar, but 0ne that seeines not so willing to divert himselfe from preaching and divinity, which he hath of late intended; otherwise I know his parts are such, as would enable him for any employment.

" If you please to enquire further from him, and by him signify your further pleasure to me, I shall be ready in this or anything else, that I am able, to expresse my selfe,

" Sir,

" Your affectionately devoted friend .and servant,
